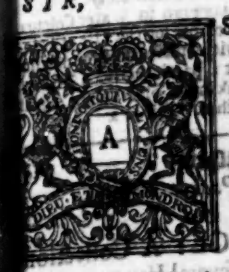
N° 17.

To the Daily Gazetteer.

SIR,



AS you are no Stranger to the Hiſtory of England, lately publiſhed by Mr. Oldmixon, nor to the Deſign of the Author in publiſhing it, I cannot ſo properly addreſs this Letter to any Perſon as to you, who are therefore the moſt ſenſible of the Neceſſity of it.

The View of the Author, both in the Hiſtory of the Reigns of the Stuarts, and in this Hiſtory which is the Sequel of the other, being in the firſt Place to expoſe the dark and pernicious Deſigns of the Enemies to our preſent happy Conſtitution, and in the Second, to prevent the World's being impoſed upon by them in thoſe Hiſtories, ſuch as that of the Rebellion, Archdeacon Echard's, &c. he might have expected ſome ſuch vain Attempt from the W——r's, the G——y's, and ſuch Eccleſiaſticks as the Miſcellaniſts; but he could not imagine that High-Church had ſo much Intereſt in the Proteſtants Abroad, as among them to find a Champion for Jacobites and Tories; but it ſeems he was miſtaken, and the Writer who calls himſelf the Continuator of Mr. du Rapin Thoyras's Hiſtory, is the very Man who has ſo abuſed King William, the Duke of Marlborough, and the Miniſtry, in the Good Times of Queen Anne, and ſo flattered Harly, St. John, Sacheverel, and all that Faction, from the Higheſt to the Loweſt, that even Foreigners have not been able to bear it, but have been provok'd to cenſure it publickly, as is done in the Bibliotheque Raiſonnée, for the firſt Quarter of this Year, p. 157, &c. where you and your Friends, Lovers of the Government and Liberty, may have an Idea of the Entertainment their Enemies are like to meet with in this Continuation.

In one Place he ſays, the Catholicks upbraided the Emperor Leopold for having contributed to baniſh Catholiciſm out of England, by his Alliance with King William, in Contradiction to what he had ſaid before, that William III. did not perſecute the Catholicks. He ſays it was the Prince of Orange's inveterate Hatred to Lewis XIV. occaſioned by his Fear of loſing the Crown of England, that incited Lewis to act as he did againſt the Liberties of Europe: Thus ſays the Raiſonneur, La haine qu'il y eut entre Lewis & Guillaume vint originairement du dernier; King William was the Aggreſſor, in the Hatred between him and Lewis XIV. who he himſelf informs us, Lewis had in the Prince's Youth ſeized the City and Principality of Orange, united it to Dauphiny, and ordered his Officers to let their Dragoons looſe on the Proteſtants, the Prince of Orange's Subjects, to force them to ſubmit to his Authority and Religion.

Of the Duke of Marlborough the Raiſonneur tells us, the Continuator has induſtriouſly raked together whatever he could meet with, to make him Little; or, at leaſt, to hinder, as much as he could, the glorious Appearance of his illuſtrious Actions. Il a pris comme a tache en toutes Rencontres de le rendre petit, &c. and having added, That the Duke of Marlborough's Succeſſes exceeded what was expected from him; that he was put above his Superiours, as well in Merit as Dignity; that he was himſelf ignorant of the Practice and Uſe of Arms; but did all by his Underlings. naming Cadogan, the Raiſonneur animadverts upon it thus; I have not yet forgot the Surpriſe and Indignation which appeared in every Body, when they read theſe Reflections in the Examiner. In a Word, the Raiſonneur aſſerts, Il adopte, ſans Facon, toutes les bruits Injurieux que l'on fit courir contre my Lord Marlborough; he adopts, without Scruple, all the Falſehood and Scandal that was publiſhed againſt the Duke of Marlborough; his Hiſtory concerning him being nothing but Une Tirade d'Invectives, a Train of Invectives, in which he has rapporte trop credulement a l'Examinateur, too credulouſly followed the Examiner; and not only in what relates to the Duke of Marlborough, but to the Whig Miniſtry, of which my Lord Godolphin was Chief: And that he has taken the Examiner, and all the Tory Libels for his Guides, we learn by the Raiſonneur, Il me ſemble qu'on doit avoir Endroit il a ſuivi trop fidelement les Idees de l'Examiner, &c. 'He has in more Places 'than one, too faithfully copy'd the Examineur; a 'Libel ſet up by the Tories, that came out three Times 'a Week in Half Sheets, written by their Top-Wits, 'of whom Lord Bolingbroke was one; the ſole Deſign of 'which was to incenſe the People againſt the firſt Miniſter; and as the People are ſooner led away by what 'is falſe, than what is true, there never was a Piece 'publiſhed ſo full of Falſhoods and Miſrepreſentations; 'it containing nothing but Wrath, Vengeance, and 'Hatred, with all Blind and Unjuſt Paſſions: To make 'a Judgment of Things and Perſons, according to 'that Libel, will neceſſarily oblige him that does it, 'to judge raſhly. This is the Rock the Continuator of 'Rapin has ſplit upon, by abandoning himſelf to the 'Conduct of the Examiner, which he has been too 'eaſily miſled by.' The Raiſonneur gives ſome Inſtances of it; I ſhall only mention one, that of the Palatines and French Proteſtants, againſt whom, and the Act of Naturalization, he rails in the very Language of that Libeller; He affirms they were invited over by the Miniſtry: And the Raiſonneur tells him, he might have ſeen if he would, in Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory, that they had no Invitation from the Miniſtry. The Continuator alledges, 'That the Palatines, joining with 'the French Proteſtants, might have become formidable, 'and by degrees have undermined the Church,' which the Raiſonneur anſwers very reaſonably in theſe Words; Il eſt vray que les François refugiez n'etoient point pour la Haute Egliſe, &c. 'Tis true, the French Proteſtants 'were not for High-Church, and the Whigs might depend upon them: This was their Crime; this made 'the Examiner abuſe them ſo cruelly.'

In his Flattery on Mr. Robert Harley, he follows the Sentiments of the Tory Addreſſes: Les Addreſſes a l'Honneur de ce Comte; and aſſures us, 'he finds the 'Praiſes given him there ſupported by Facts that 'proved the Juſtice of them, and that the wild Charge 'againſt him was only for ſtale Crimes, his being a 'Friend to France and the Pretender.' He ſays he had no Correſpondence with him; but inſinuates, that he had with Bolingbroke; and the Raiſonneur obſerves, it appears that he had Intelligence with the latter.

Of the Continuator's Paragraph concerning Sacheverel, the Raiſonneur writes, Il ſeroit difficile de faire plus des Fautes en ſi peu des paroles, 'It would be difficult to 'commit ſo many Faults in ſo few Words.' And how well the Continuator has imitated the Diſcretion and Integrity of Rapin may be judged by what follows, Ses Reflexions auroient pu etre plus meſurées, &c. 'He 'might have been more modeſt in his Reflections, 'ſome of which ſeem to be full of Prejudice and Precipitation. In running over the two Volumes, I 'laid my Finger on ſeveral of them, &c.'

As the Room that is ſpared for Letters in your Paper, will admit of no more on this Subject at preſent, I ſhall give you the like Trouble in a few Days, and conclude now with this Remark, that ſince the Continuator has taken his Inſtructions and Memoirs from St. John, the Examiner, and the Libels of that Faction, the Neceſſity of Mr. Oldmixon's proſecuting his Deſign will be apparent and unconteſted; and as he has ſucceſsfully encountered the Hiſtories and political Pieces of the Enemies to our Conſtitution at Home, ſo he doubts not, with more Eaſe and Pleaſure, to deal with thoſe Abroad, and prevent the Miſchief intended.

Paris, July 23.

THE Ruſſian Army appointed to aſſiſt the Emperor, conſiſts of 13,000 Foot, 14,000 Dragoons, 3000 Cuiraſſiers, and 9000 Coſſacks, in all 39,000 Men, commanded in Chief by General Laſcy, who has under him two Lieutenant Generals and two Major-Generals.

'Tis aſſured, that the ſudden Retreat of the Imperial Army out of Italy, was the better to fruſtrate the Projects of the Elector of Bavaria. 'Tis ſaid, that France has ſent Word to that Elector, that, in caſe the Imperial Troops give him any Cauſe of Umbrage, the Allies will ſend an Army into Tyrol.

We find the Seaſon here extreamly cold; we have almoſt continual Storms, and the Fruits and Herbage round this City are not only backward, but almoſt all ſpoiled by Vermin, particularly ſome thouſand Acres eat up by Graſhoppers: great Sicknеſſes have alſo happened by Peoples eating of Salads, &c. On the 16th at Night, here was a great Storm of Rain and Thunder, which fell and broke upon ſeveral Houſes in Town; in a Tavern near the Palace of Bourbon all their Pewter was melted by the Lightning, but no Perſon in the Houſe hurt. We hear alſo of great Damage in the Country, far and near, by the Storms. At Blois it was dreadful, the Thunder continued for 48 Hours; Hail-ſtones fell as big as Eggs, and broke Windows to the Damage of above 30,000 Livres in the ſaid Town. The fine Royal Palace there was intirely burnt down by Lightning; and all the neighbouring Country was, at the ſame time, wholly laid waſte by the Violence of the Tempeſt.

LONDON.

Laſt Week was tried at Guildhall, by a ſpecial Jury, an Iſſue directed out of the High Court of Chancery, wherein a Gentleman of Hatton-Garden was Plaintiff, and a certain Attorney and Solliciter of Symond's-Inn, Defendant, touching Monies lent by the Plaintiff in the Defendant's late Father's Name, which the Defendant claimed as his Father's Money; but it fully appeared to be the Plaintiff's Money, and that the Defendant had frequently acknowledged the ſame ſo to be; and that the Plaintiff frequently made uſe of his Father's Name in Truſt for him; and the Jury accordingly found for the Plaintiff, to the intire Satisfaction of the Court: And we hear, that ſince this Diſpute aroſe, the Plaintiff hath prevailed in ſeveral Suits in Chancery, wherein the Defendant was concerned againſt him.

Yeſterday Morning about 5 o'Clock, Caſſandra Dutcheſs of Chandos departed this Life at Hendon in Middleſex, whither her Grace went on Tueſday laſt to pay a Viſit to Mrs. Bridges, a Relation of the Duke's, and was ſeized with a Fit of an Apoplexy. She was Siſter to the Right Hon. Thomas Willoughby, Lord Middleton, and Half-Siſter to Sir Richard Child, now Earl of Tilney. She was ſecond Wife to the Duke of Chandos, whoſe firſt Wife, the Daughter of Sir Thomas Lake of Cannons in the County of Middleſex, Kt. died in December 1712, having had ſix Sons and two Daughters, of whom John Marquis of Carnarvan is the only ſurviving Son; but his Grace had no Iſſue by this Lady. Her Grace was endowed with all the good Qualities that ever could be deſired in a Perſon of her Quality, and the Loſs of her is greatly lamented by all who had the Happineſs of her Converſation, and is an inexpreſſible Grief to that moſt noble Family.

The ſame Day the Right Rev. the Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter came to his Houſe in Groſvenor-ſtreet from his Palace at Farnham; but he made ſo ſhort a Stay, that after Dinner his Lordſhip ſet out thither again.

(Member for Cambridge, by his firſt Lady, a Daughter of Sir Ambroſe Crawley, Kt.) an agreeable young Lady, with a Fortune of 20,000 l.

On Wedneſday Morning laſt came on at Abingdon, the Trial of the Rev. Mr. Silk, for killing one Fallow Deer on the 29th Day of April laſt, about 11 o'Clock at Night, in Windſor Great Park. It appeared that the Dog which Mr. Silk had with him, did run at, and kill a White Buck, which he paunched, and cut off its Head. The Paunch was left upon the Spot, which the Keepers found early in the Morning; after which they laid on the Blood Hounds, and by the Help of them, and the Meaſure of the Horſe's Foot, they purſued it to Mr. Silk's Door, when one of the Keepers went into the Stable, and there found Mr. Silk's Sadle, with White Pens or Hair of a Deer upon it, which confirming him in his Suſpicion, he went into the Cellar, and there found the Deer itſelf. Mr. Silk confeſſed the whole Matter, but alledging that the Dog killed the Buck againſt his Will, after a Trial of about 4 Hours, the Jury acquitted him.

Laſt Tueſday came on in the Mayor's Court at Guildhall, a Hearing between Mr. Fathers, a Butcher of Newgate Market, Plaintiff, and Mr. Page of the ſame Market, Defendant, for foreſtalling the Market; and after hearing Council on both Sides, the Plaintiff was nonſuited.

We were miſinformed when we mentioned in our former, that James Oglethorpe, Eſq; Member of Parliament for Haſlemere in Surry, was to ſucceed Robert Johnſon, Eſq; deceaſed, in the Government of South Carolina, we being aſſured from very good Hands, that he hath declined accepting that Employment.
